

Integrated Care Systems and Housing Development Programme

February 2021 - May 2021

*“The programme helped me to refocus on what we do,
why we do it and what we’re trying to achieve.”*

Nicky Ellison, National Specialist Support Manager
Anchor Hanover

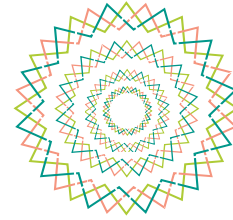

What are the benefits?

This online development programme will help housing associations engage with Integrated Care Systems in the NHS.

Over 25 housing associations have already benefitted from our previous development programmes. Beginning in December 2020, this new online programme will bring delegates together so they can:

- strengthen their understanding of how to engage with their local health colleagues;
- build awareness of the competencies needed to deliver within a healthcare setting;
- identify partnering opportunities with health;
- describe and refine their offer to NHS providers and commissioners;
- build their credibility as potential partners with the health sector.

An opportunity for housing

The implementation of the NHS long-term plan has resulted in new forms of integrated care being developed across England. As the health and care sectors begin to talk about “recovery” in the context of Covid-19, their approach to integration is changing in response to the new ways of working that have been developed in the first phase of the pandemic.

The Covid-19 pandemic will lead to an increase in physical and mental ill-health in the UK, because of the illness itself as well as the measures being taken to protect people from the virus. With unemployment expected to rise to levels double that of the 2008/2009 recession, we can expect to see 10 million people needing new or additional mental health support as a result of the crisis.

At the same time, the Covid-19 pandemic has seen an acceleration in integrated working across the NHS, as well as between the NHS and community partners. Significant amounts of care has been moved online and stronger relationships between health, care, housing and community services have been forged through the emergency.

Housing associations have played a significant role in responding to the pandemic by identifying vulnerable households and providing advice and support. As we move into recovery and reset, it will be critical that housing providers are able to capture the positive aspects of the transformation that has taken place and be bold in how it moves forward.

“The programme helped me explore possibilities for engaging with NHS colleagues to deliver new services or exploit existing relationships. It is hugely relevant for senior members of staff.”

Lawrence Santcross, Chief Executive
Transform Housing & Support

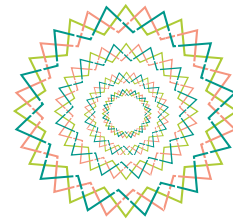

How it works

The four online sessions will take place across four months, facilitated by Andrew van Doorn, Chief Executive, HACT and Peter Molyneux, Managing Director, Common Cause Consulting.

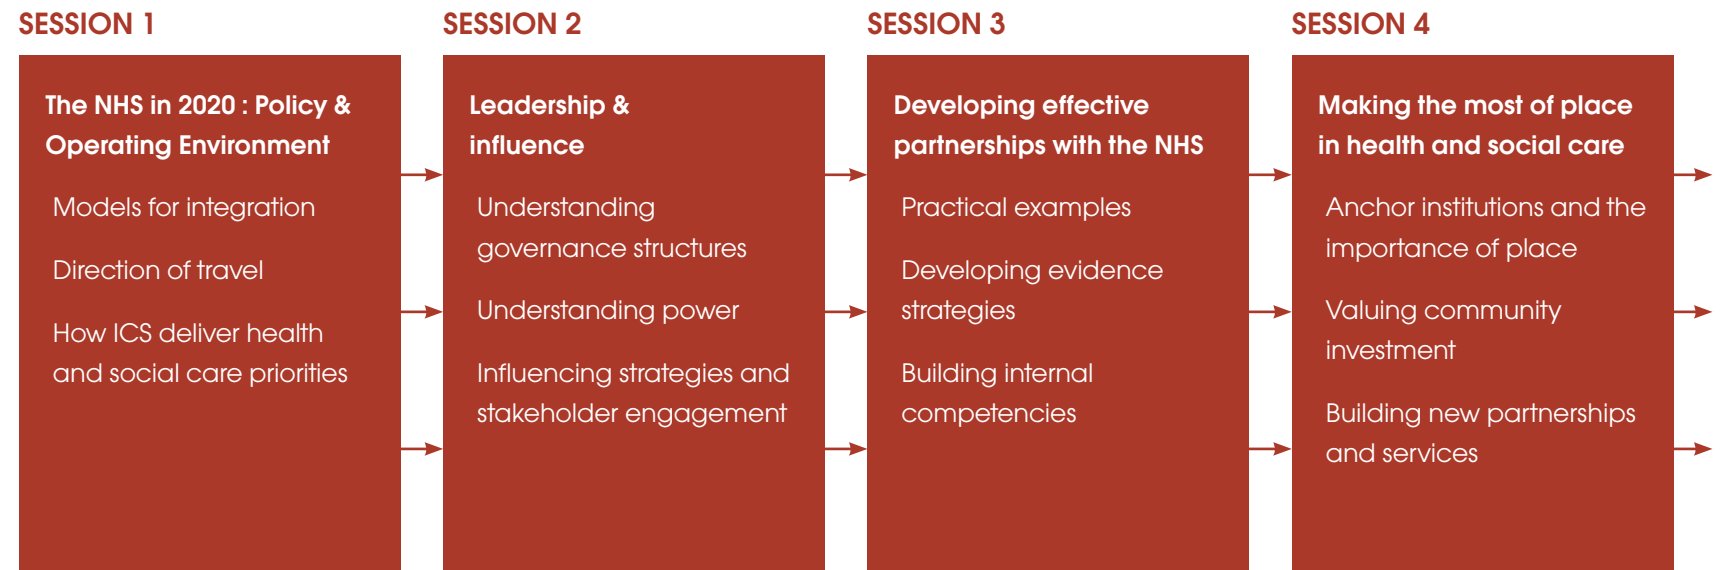

Both are recognised experts in housing and health, and both hold NED positions on NHS Trusts. They have exhaustive contacts within the health and care sectors. A range of guest speakers will be invited to participate in the sessions, bringing with them insights and expertise on how Integrated Care Systems are working in practice.

Delegates will be encouraged to work together as an action learning set so they can develop and embed learning from the programme. They will work together with support from Drew and Peter to define and articulate the offer of their organisation to local health systems.

The programme will enable delegates to engage in long-term partnerships that transform the delivery of health and care, while simultaneously resulting in better integration between housing and health.

Course content

“The programme gave me the opportunity to network, to understand other organisation’s experience and to be inspired. Unlike other events, this was much more intimate.”

Charmaine Simei, Director of Community Investment
Longhurst Group
